In all armies, the different ranks must exist, and, to insure success, the inferior at all times and under all circumstances must chey the lawful order of his superior, without stopping to ask why or wherefore. It is enflicient for the real soldier to know that his orders are from a legal source, and he has no right whatever to know why those orders are given. To speak plainly and truly, there is too much democracy in our army for it to ever become thoroughly disciplined, and we will out say that while this democracy, se existing in the army, is injurious to us as a military power, It is not, also, the great saleguard against the sucrosching power of any tyrant and the supporting pillars of our country's greatness. Who or how many were engaged in this work are not known, but it is plain that the whole thing was preconcerted, and that a very large number of men were engaged in it. They must have been men, too, living somewhere near the line, as well as rebels from Price's army, sent there for this purpose, and all of them ought to be made to suffer for this villainy.

Gen, Halleck will, of course, give prompt attention to the plan of the rebels, designed, of course, to prevent him from transporting troups along the read by which to preserve the peace of that section of the State. GEO. D. PRENTICE. Fduors. OLIVER LUCAM, Leon Editor and Reporter. TUESDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1861.

The prevailing conviction amongst conin the hands of the Generals of the army than that Congress in this respect canno do better than to abide by what it has done already, and forbid the thought! leave the rest to the sound discretion of our Generals, subject of course to the correction of the Commander-in-Chof. We hope that Congress itself will tote this view of the question. A volume might he written in support of the view without oxhausting the argument.

The subject of the exchange of prisoners is at length attracting the attention o the country. So far as we have noticed there is but one opinion nn the subject. There seems indeed to be no room for two. "Why," says the Boston Post, "there can be any longer delay in calecting an exchange of prisoners, as a general rule, is more than we can comprehend, In times like these its seems guerile to stand upon a delicate point of etiquette or of law. Justice, humanity to thoso who have imperilled their lives for the country, require that they should be taken from Sonthern dungoons and restored to their homes or to their places in the army. Disease and despair are sucking out their energies, their vitality, and fast speeding them to their graves and still the Government does not effectually move. Men whn entered the country's service full of strength and high hope, by tho vieissitndes of war are taken pris oners, ard confined in the felon's cell, and from fear that too much cour- may be hoped, however, that by the proper to their captors, these men are permitted to rot a formal exchange: or at least the way we have received their flags of truce, as from regular belligerente, hna placod us in the relation of belligerenta dealing with belligerents and sentiments of humanity require that we should go further, and that immediately, bcfore it is too late, and effect a release of those greatly changed, by the introduction of steam who are in confinement. It is not a matter for argument, but rather for appeal to the feelings of the Government. By the exchange humanity will gain much, and so will patriotism, and the efficiency of the army by the restoration to its ranks of those who should be there; and the voice of the people should not be silent until the end is cffected." The just-

They express the prevailing opinion of the Evon the National Intelligencer, with characteristic punctiliousness, "hints' approval, and but "hesitates" objection. "We observe," says that able and venerable journal, "that many of our contemporaries continue to give expression to what they represent to be the popular dissatisfaction with the inaction of the Administration in the matter of adopting a systematic and uniform plan for the exchange of prisoners. This sensitiveness, we doubt not may be largely traced to the feeling of personal sympathy cherished generally in the lord States for those who have incurred the pardships of capture and imprisonment in the military service of cir country.

ness of these remarks cannot be fairly disputed.

Whatever political anccessition may be alleged in defence of a policy which enures to their detriment, it does not at all mitigate the severity of treatment to which many find themselves exposed, through no delect in their claims to the rights of war, hut simply because of tho illegal and insurrectionary character of those against whom they have been called by their Government to contend. It is thus that the curse of sedition, hy one of those reactions which offend the natural sonse of equity, is in its effects visited upon the head of the innocent and guilty alike.

And we doubt not that this feeling has been intensified by the perception that the theory on which the Government is supposed to deny to our captured soldiers the benefits resulting from a systematic exchange of prisoners has not been observed with a consistency and theroughmatter of any great moment lo the National Government. It is urged that we are merely playing with words, while the thing that we ignore is going on. Do we not virtually concedo to the rebels the status of belligerents every day? What is implied by the flage of truce that pass continually between the lines of the opposing armies? What did the agreement of Gen. Butler and Com. Stringham to receive the Hatteras garrison as prisoners of war amount to? What did the release of Col. Pegram's command, on parole, hy Gen. Me-Clellan, in Western Virginia mean? Ur what prisoners of war, in reliance on the generosity of the enemy for a reciprocation of this favor in the interest of our own captive soldiers? Such a saving of dignity at the expense of our suffering troops is hardly worth the price paid for it, at least in the estimation of practical minds." These reflections gather capecial strength from the consideration that the refusil on nur part to formally exchange prisoners involves really no saving of dignity whatever but rather a loss of dignity. The attempt under the circumstauces to keep up a show of the assumption that we are not in a state of civil war is certainly far more undig nified than would be a frank proclamation of what we are every day proclaiming indirectly in a hundrod different ways. There is a want of dignity and of prudence also in the attempt to abut one's oyes te the real formidableness of our adversary but not in recognizfied nor discreet nor possible. All the dignitity as well as all the reason and humanity is therefore on the side of the general demand of the country. We trust a compliance with this meet humane and rational and dignified claim will not be longer put off. A prompt compliance will strengthen the national cause in every conceivable re-ing him as he is. Wo are in reality in the

[For the Louisvitte Journal.] LMPLOGLIO WITH ENGLAND IN CONSEQUE YOU CA THE RELICUE OF SLIDELL AND MASON. It is not at all fer the interest of Great Naions to go to war with one another, nowadays, for trifles. Admonished by the stapendous magnitude of the struggle, for very life, for more than life, at home, we are quite sure that our own Government will be very guarded in reference to giving needless offence to eny power, least of all to that power whose neighboring colonies, and whose magnificont

Navy would render its hostility particularly nconvenient. And on her part, whilst she needs our corn, and desires our colton and tho general advantages of our vast mutual commerce, it cannot be believed that England will he ever ready to take offence. The bonds, for good behavior, under which each s placed to the other, are amazingly heavy bonds Besides England is too great a power without sad loss to her dignity and self-respect servative Unionists is that the whole subject of to be essily provoked, and as to availing herself slavery in its relations to the war is more safe of the moment of advantage, to pounce upon an unollending friendly power, merely because in the hands of Congress; and, accordingly, sho already has her hands more than sufficient that it does not provide to submit the amendly full-all magnanimity, all chivalry, utterly

With these impressions, let the Slidell and Mason easo be candidly stated. Under ono nterpretation of that part of the international ode which relates to the questions at issuo, it s clearly, in the opinion of the crown lawyers themselves, a legal and perfectly justifiable arrest. In our own interest, and from our stand-point, it was perfectly natural that we should take this most obvious view, and act

By telegram we are now startled at learning that the British Government is disposed to take rather a different view of the question; and to say that there are now circumstances in this case not yet adjudicated If their viow is correct we may have erred, may have been hasty and ill-advised, in the scizure. If the demands Lord Lyon may be authorized to those upon which the arrest was made, though under the same law, no self-respect will be lost by our frankly acknowledging our error as soon as convinced of it. Meantime, uo doubt the usual courteous exchanges of views, and of arguments to sustain those views, will be made between Lord Lvon and Mr. Scward, and transmitted to toe British Goverment hefore, if ever, final issue is joined. I tesy, too much recognition, shall be conceded exercise of mutual forbearance and can-truct is impaired. dor, the difficulty can at once be adjustaway and perish. Whather the act was one of free will or of compulsion is immaterial, the mother bank has ordered the branches to traesfer the mency of the people and of the State (for the State owns two millions of the stock) to Liverpool, whence the lunds may he drawn for the use of the rehellion. In this state of affairs a bil was introduced to protect the stockholders, a bil which they need not eccopt if it was not to thefi make are hased up in grounds different from interest, and against the operations of which the can invoke the protection of the courts. That the stockholders are not asked to vote on the amendmant before its provisions go into operation, is no objection to the bill, for it has frequently been the cu tom of the Legislature to act without the previous assent of the stockholders. The weakness of the Governor's veto is shown in the fect that he entirely ignores that the Northern Bank is under durces, and complaies that the stockholders are not permitted to vote upon it, and also raises the constitutional objection that a con

It was most aptly asked by Senator Robinson in discussing the veto, whether this was not a use where a chancellor, upon application, would grant an injunction, even if only a small minor ity of the stockholders requested it. The fund of the hark are directly or indirectly controlled hy those who have thrown off their allegiance to he Government and are obstructing the enforcement of the laws. If a chancellor has a clear power to interfere for protection, the Legislature ertainly has the same power to provide a remedy hy law. If the alleged facts upon which the bill is hased are untrue, and the stockholders reject it, it can come up before the courta. But the presumption is that all the stockholders who are free to act without the restraint of military power desire the bill. The Lagia laturo has a soveroign power to afford re-modification adapted to precisely this class of cases? In any event, this is not a flash which i.f. It is idle for the Governor to say that i impairs a contract if the Legislature alters a rank charter, for if the power to amend is not specifically reterred in the charter, it is by a general law of the Commenwealth, which never London Times says the Trent affair should be This reserved right does not clothe the Legislacedents and authorities" before ture with the power to violate the constitution a prize court. But we perceive, perhaps, more clearly than on can, that there is, in point of fact, a reection of sentiment and a change of conviction already commenced, throughout the entire north, upon this whole sulject. And this reaction will, as soon as possible, display itself effectively. Should we not all bear in mind, that most of the members of the Lower House of Congress represent only the "Wide Awake" excitement and extrevagance of 1860? that meny of these menibers were merely thrown to the surface by the agilations of that period, and are incanable of anything more than the shallow conduct, which belongs to that style of partisenship? They re member the stuff, which secured to thom their present places, and they are too foolish and superothers that he bears in elligence that the continent coincides with the English law of the case or necessities, which have started and are nrg-It is certain that serve at test upholding Wilkes ing on the change. It is one of the necessary misfortunes of the present crisis, that the existing Congress was plec'ed and the present Cabinet was uppointed before the year began, and that, although the progress of the war itself has taught us how dancerous were many of the elemente which conrolled the election of 1860, yet we are compelled to whit the return of the hallot-boxes, before we ror Evansville, Padwab, and Calro. can show how much wiser we are, and whether our patriotiam is any nearer to the stendard o constitutional duty.

Most earnestly is it to be hoped, that, meanwhile, there may be no unnecessary counter excitements which would repress the reaction now going on at the North. And is it not wise for us o hear in mind that there is no greater force in nature, no better cure for political disease, than n wholesome, deep-seated, supular reaction? Many of us at the North have long beliaved that such a reaction would come. We now know that It will, if it is not checked by new irritation. We cometimes think that the war itself, with all its The Children must be Cared for terrors and all its blood, was the Providential appointment, by which a violent morbid sentimentalism was to be thrown off-the meens by which great numbers of our countrymen, prone, like Pharisees, to condemn only the supposed sina of other people, were to be themselves delivered from an enormone and fool mass of self-right ecusness, the filthiest of all sins. "Therefore, we beg and Implore, wnit, wait
